MORE AWARDS MADE AT THE POULTRY SHOW

Cups and Association Ribbons Awarded Yesterday. Judges Give Their Views of the Fine Points of Winning Birds.

Hundreds of chicken fanciers were attracted to the annual show of the Virginia Poultry Association, 405 West Broad Street, yesterday, and they were well paid for the time spent there, for the 1,000 birds displayed are above the average in quality, and many of them are the best in the association. Newton Cosh, of Nanaimo, N. Y., one of the judges, said he had many years' experience in judging chickens, but that the display at this show was of a very high order. He was especially enthusiastic over the Rhode Island Reds, which he said, was one of the best classes exhibited. "The first cockerel in the Rhode Island class is one of the best I have ever handled. It took the club special for both form and color, while all the winners in this class are way above the average."

Judge Cosh talked at length about the prize winners. "I found," he said, "that the first cock in the Single Comb Black Minorcas, exhibited by C. F. Cross, of Richmond, to be an excellent bird, of grand type and color, with excellent head points. The first hen and pullet in the class are all worthy of special mention."

"The Barred Plymouth Rocks, exhibited by M. E. Hickson, of Lynchburg, were excellent birds. First award to the cockerel in this class was awarded because of the exceptional quality of the bird. It had splendid head points, fine shape and excellent color, while the second cockerel, owned by L. H. Meade, of Richmond, was not as far advanced, but when fully feathered it will class with the best in the South."

"The Indian games are a wonderful class all the way through. There are some imported birds in the lot, but the home-bred birds are very good."

"The winner in the White Orpington class belonged to F. S. Bullington, of Richmond. It won the club special prize for the best cockerel in the English class, and it is an excellent bird. The first pullet, also owned by Mr. Bullington, is an extra good bird."

"The F. F. V. Poultry Farm," which is owned by C. F. Sauer, said Judge A. L. Emch, of Toledo, Ohio, captured first prize for pen in the White Leghorn cockerel class. It is easily the best single comb White Leghorn cockerel in the entire show, while it is also an extra high class, and one of the most highly colored, either of its judges has ever handled."

"The first cockerel in the S. C. Brown Leghorns, owned by L. E. Myers, of Richmond, is an exceptionally good bird," said Judge Emch. "It is an easy winner in its class, and has excellent color and good shape."

"The first Black Langshan is another good bird. It has good color and shape and would be a contender in any show. It belongs to T. E. McCracken, of Richmond."

"The Light Brahma class, A. J. Seelman's birds showed to excellent advantage. "W. C. Lassiter, of Richmond, owns the first prize Black Orpington cockerel, which was an easy winner. It has many good qualities, while the S. C. Buff Orpington class, Mr. Lassiter's hen won first honors. It has splendid color, a deep body, and it is indeed the queen of its class in the show."

"The Stacey Poultry Farm, of Amelia, Va., made its first showing in Barred Plymouth Rocks, and won second cockerel and fifth pen prizes, and special prize for best shape."

"The Buff Orpington form the largest class at the show, while the Rhode Island Reds and Barred Rocks are close second. Speaking of the winner in the Buff Orpington cockerel class, F. S. Bullington was owned by the Cruden Orpington Farm, of near Richmond. Judge Emch said: "This cockerel is one of the best I have ever handled. It is one even with shade of golden buff from head to tail, and is easily the best cockerel Buff made in the entire class."

"Buff Orpington ducks from the Cruden Farm, White Meadows, Bucks, and R. Randolph Taylor's yards, Silver Spangle Hamburgs, exhibited by Miss Bertie C. Cooks, of Petersburg; White Orpingtons, from S. S. Burch's yards, and a small lot of George F. Cross, of Petersburg, from George F. Cross's farm, at Wilton-on-the-James, the latter a strong second in their class, are among the features of the show."

The show continues until Saturday night at 10 o'clock. The officials of the Virginia Poultry Association wish to emphasize the fact that the show is not a money-making institution, although a small admission charge is levied to help meet expenses. The idea of the annual show is to aid the young breeders of the State in their work and to encourage more extensive poultry raising on the small farms throughout the State.
